Sociability heuristics for interactive television

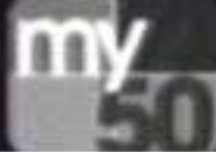

1. Offer different channels and levels for communicating freely
2. Use awareness tools for communicating availabilities
3. Allow both synchronous and asynchronous use
4. Support remote as well as collocated interaction
5. Exploit viewing behaviour for informing and engaging other viewers
6. Give the user control over actions and system settings
7. Guarantee personal privacy and group privacy
8. Minimize distraction from the television program
9. Notify the user of incoming events and situation changes
10. Adapt to appropriate television program genres
11. Let users share content flexibly
12. Encourage shared activities

A man with grey hair, wearing a light blue long-sleeved shirt and khaki pants, is lying on a light-colored sofa. He has his hands behind his head and his feet propped up, appearing relaxed. The background shows a modern living room with large windows, a concrete fireplace, and a potted plant.

Kinski en Herzog

De relatie tussen Klaus Kinski, berucht om zijn woedeaanvallen, en Herzog was turbulent Klaus Kinski (1926-1991, geboren in Polen als Nikolaus Günther Nakszynski) en Herzog (München, 1942) kenden elkaar al vanaf jonge leeftijd en hebben samen vijf films gemaakt. De eerste was 'Aguirre: wrath of God' (eveneens opgenomen in de Peruaanse jungle, en daarna 'Woyzeck' (1978), 'Nosferatu the Vampyre' (1979), 'Fitzcarraldo' en 'Cobra Verde' (1988).

Na 'Cobra Verde' zwoer Kinski nooit meer met de regisseur samen te werken. In zijn autobiografie 'Kinski Uncut' noemt hij Werner Herzog 'a miserable, hateful, malevolent, avaricious, money-hungry, nasty, sadistic, treacherous, blackmailing, cowardly, thoroughly dishonest creep.' Herzog maakte in 1999 'My Best Fiend', een documentaire over zijn haat-liefdeverhouding met Kinski. Daarin vertelt hij dat de Peruaanse indianen tijdens het filmen van Fitzcarraldo aanboden om de heetgebakerde Kinski te vermoorden: 'I needed Kinski for a few more shots, so I turned them down. I have always regretted that I lost that opportunity'. Overigens zou in eerste instantie Jason Robards de rol van Fitzcarraldo spelen, met Mick Jagger als zijn assistent Wilbur. Maar na drie jaar draaien, toen de film al bijna voor de helft klaar was kreeg Robards dysenterie en trok hij zich op doktersadvies terug. Mick Jagger moest ook stoppen vanwege een geplande tournee met de Rolling Stones. Herzog schrapte de rol van Wilbur en begon van voren af aan te filmen met Klaus Kinski in de hoofdrol. De tweede draaiperiode duurde meer dan drie jaar.
